AN EDIFYING SPECTACLE

harles De Young, editor of the San Francisco h onicle, was shot in his own office on Friday night by I M Kalloch, son of that same Kalloch who climbed into the mavoralty from the pulpit by using as a stepping stone the sympathetic popularity which the attempt at his own assassination by De Young inspired among his rabble following. At this writing the wires have brought no intimation of the cause of the shooting of De Young. The naked announcement, in all its terrible significance, is all that the terse telegraph has vouchsafed; but from what is known of De Young's time of his appearance in the scene character as a journalist, the motives he was kept in his cage behind the which actuated young Kalloch may be scenery.
